CHIHIRO KARIYA

Intellectual Historian of Early Modern Ideas

About

I am Chihiro Kariya, an intellectual historian of early modern ideas. My main subject is Edmund Burke, who is best known for his late writings on the French Revolution and is the 18th-century member of Parliament in Britain. I currently work as an Assistant Professor at the Articulation Center for High School and University at Kanazawa University, Japan.

I received my Ph.D. in Policy Science from Ritsumeikan University at Kyoto in March 2009, where I was supervised by Prof. Tamihiro Shigemori. I hold a M.A. degree in Humanities and Social Sciences under the supervision of Professor Motoichi Terada, from Nagoya City University in Japan.

This website is intended to post my research in English and is updated about 3 or 4 times a year. On this website, you will find my published works, including articles, monographs, reviews, and translations. You will also find news and updates on my current research projects, as well as information on upcoming events and conferences where I will be speaking. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or would like to discuss projects.

For my academic profile in Japanese, please refer to the researchmap, managed by the Japan Science and Technology Agency (JST).
